Degree Completion Program:

The Howard University Degree Completion Program (DCP) in Leadership Studies is a fully online, interdisciplinary degree completion program designed for adult learners who have been out of school for five or more years and have previously earned at least 60 college credits. Housed within the College of Arts and Sciences, the program prepares students to complete their undergraduate degree with a specialized focus on ethical, transformative leadership.

Rooted in Howard's legacy of social justice and academic excellence, the curriculum emphasizes leadership theory, critical thinking, community development, and public service. Courses draw from diverse disciplines—including Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, Economics, and African American Studies—allowing students to explore leadership through historical, cultural, and policy-based lenses.

The program is structured around flexible, online delivery, making it accessible for working adults and non-traditional students. Graduates will be well-equipped to lead in public, private, nonprofit, and community-based organizations with a strong foundation in ethics, civic engagement, and strategic decision-making.

About the Leadership Studies Program

The Leadership Studies concentration provides students with an interdisciplinary understanding of leadership theory and practice. Drawing from expertise across multiple departments in the College of Arts and Sciences—including Philosophy, African Studies, Political Science, Psychology, and Military Science—the curriculum integrates transformational leadership models, ethical frameworks, community development strategies, and real-world applications.

Students examine leadership through multiple lenses: as an inherent human phenomenon, a vital practice for harmonious collective functioning, and a set of values essential for creating positive social change. The program emphasizes ethical integrity, participatory governance, collaborative innovation, and the pursuit of shared ideals toward accomplishing worthy goals for the common good.

Through engagement with reputable leaders in government, international institutions, corporations, and academic settings, students build upon their professional experiences to develop leadership careers that advance equity, justice, and sustainable community development.
